Definitions:

Rate Review means a process to set reimbursement rates for Medicaid and other non-Medicaid services based on FSSA's objectives of transparency, alignment, sustainability, person-centeredness and equity. A rate review is performed using a methodology that complies with regulatory requirements specific to the rate(s) being reviewed. Rate reviews may result in recommendations for rate increases, rate decreases or a combination of both. Rate reviews are aligned with the biennial budget, so that decisions about whether and to what extent rate review results can be funded are made as part of the overall biennial budget process.

Rebasing means a process to realign rates in a way that is budget neutral. Provider rates are updated to align with a rating benchmark (such as Medicare or a Rate Survey) with the result being some rates increases and some rate decreases. The overall result is a more equitable distribution of reimbursement rates that is delivered on a budget neutral basis.
